

Act No. 11 (H.128). Executive Branch; Legislature; results-based accountability (RBA); common language

An act relating to the use of results-based accountability common language in Vermont law

This act makes amendments to terminology used in Vermont law so that the terminology is consistent with 2014 Acts and Resolves No. 186, which established the framework to enable State government to use results-based accountability (RBA) to assist in its decision making. The amendments in this act change language in Vermont laws that already require performance analysis so that those laws use RBA's common language. In RBA, the General Assembly establishes population level "outcomes," which are analyzed using "indicators," and the Executive Branch analyzes the "results" of its programs using "performance measures" that it establishes.
